DESCRIPTION OF REQUIREMENTS:

Background:
The aim of the International Human Dimensions Programme on Global Environmental Change (IHDP) is to provide leadership in framing, developing, and integrating policy relevant social science research on global change and to promote the application of key findings of this research to help address environmental challenges. The aim of the International Social Science Council (ISSC) – a co-sponsor of the IHDP – is to advance the social sciences (their quality, novelty and utility) in all parts of the world.

There is growing recognition within the global environmental change (GEC) community of the importance of social science research for addressing the global environmental problems humanity faces. Both the ICSU visioning and Belmont processes have highlighted the need for a wider diversity of high quality, policy relevant social science research. This poses two questions. The first question revolves around the notion of the ways and means to engage the broader social science community. This would particularly include those who are not presently engaged in GEC issues but whose work is highly relevant in generating new insights and solutions to the environmental problems we face both today and in the future. The second question then focuses on the present organisational landscape and inquires if the present structure and processes of IHDP are adequate enough to meet the growing demands for credible, policy relevant social science inputs and if not, what needs to be done to enable it to evolve to meet the changing landscape.
Project Goals and Objectives:
The project will be conducted in a two-stage approach. Stage One will focus on addressing the first question, while Stage Two will address the second.

Objectives Stage One
1. To gain a better understanding of the social science research landscape on GEC issues;
2. To gain a better understanding of the disincentives and possible incentives for engaging the broader social science community;
3. To gain a better understanding of how the social science community perceives their role and contribution to the GEC fora, as well as their views and perceptions on IHDP and ISSC as potential leaders for engaging the social science community; and
4. To gain a better understanding of how decision makers perceive the role of social scientists, IHDP and ISSC in the GEC arena.

Objectives Stage Two
1. To help identify a process that can develop short (2 years), medium (5 years) and long-term (10 years) strategies to position IHDP as the key entity for mobilising, facilitating and catalysing social science research for addressing GEC;
2. To develop a resource mobilisation strategy;
3. To identify key partnerships within the UN and academic sectors; and
4. To develop an outreach, dissemination and impact strategy for IHDP outputs.

Required Services:
- To undertake a survey of the broader social sciences community (the supply side) as well as policymakers and other potential users (the demand side) of their expectations and needs of the social sciences.
- To draft a white paper outlining the present landscape of the social sciences within the GEC fora and provide recommendations in addressing the main challenges addressed in stage one.
- To convene a UNU-IHDP retreat to capture all internal aspects relevant to the strategic planning
- To undertake a SWOT analysis of IHDP.
- To develop a strategy paper covering the four objectives of stage two, drawing from the survey results of Stage One and the SWOT analysis.
- To get feedback on the strategy papers from the relevant stakeholders surveyed and finalise the strategy paper for submission to IHDP’s sponsors for endorsement and approval.

* Only companies with relevant experience in supplying similar services will be considered qualified.
